New podcast: Norwegian – On Air

Norwegian Air Shuttle has today launched its first episode in a new podcast series called Norwegian – On Air. The podcast is made for investors, staff and others who would like to learn more about the company and the aviation industry. Norwegian has more than 16,000 investors spread all over the world, and with limited resources it is impossible to communicate on a regular basis with each of these. With this podcast we aim to increase the transparency and give more people insight to key priorities for the company and the development in the airline industry. The quarterly presentations naturally have a short-term focus, and we will try to complement these with a more long-term view in the podcast.

In this first episode CEO Bjørn Kjos gives an overview of current topics for the company.

The podcast is co-hosted by Investor Relations Officer Stine Klund and Head of Internal Communications Helene Løken. It can be accessed both through iTunes and at Norwegian's IR website.
