Norwegian launches more routes from London Gatwick

Norwegian's route network from London Gatwick continues to expand. There has been a great demand for high-quality flights at a low fare from London Gatwick and now passengers have four new destinations to choose from this winter; Madeira and La Palma for the sun-seekers and Grenoble and Salzburg for the ski enthusiasts.

Norwegian also increases the number of weekly departures on its routes from London Gatwick to Lanzarote, Rome and Larnaca.

From October 28th and November 1st, respectively, Norwegian offers sun-seekers two weekly flights from London Gatwick to the Portuguese island of Madeira and one weekly flight to La Palma in the Canary Islands. Those more keen on white and powdery conditions in the Alps this winter, can from December 13th fly direct to Grenoble and Salzburg once a week. Tickets are available today.

A major player at London Gatwick

Today, Norwegian is a major player at London Gatwick airport. The airline established a crew base at the airport in 2013 and now offers 41 routes from London Gatwick. Norwegian has eight 737-800 aircraft based at London Gatwick today as well as around 90 pilots and 200 cabin crew members.
